

CONFERENCE:

Sustainability and competitiveness in supply chains.

FELIPE CARAZO

University of Costa Rica, Bachelor in Science Biology 94 – 98.

Duke University, Master in Environmental Management Resource Economics and Policy.

SESIÓN 1B
CHALLENGES OF SUSTAINABLE MARKETS.

SEPT 28 | 2022

Felipe Carazo serves as Head of Public Sector Engagement at Tropical Forest Alliance, initiative housed by the World Economic Forum. He brings more than twenty years of experience developing and overseeing programs and initiatives addressing policy, governance, financial instruments, impact metrics, capacity building, private-public partnerships, south-south cooperation, resource management, rural development, conservation, human wellbeing, integrated landscape management and climate change.

His work has included overseeing a vast portfolio of programs and projects in Central America, Mexico, Peru, Morocco, Indonesia and Madagascar. He holds a master's degree in environmental management from Nicholas School of Environment, mayor in Resource Economics and Policy, Duke University. He served as Executive Director of Fundecor and advisor to the Government of Costa Rica for six years. He also worked for ten years at The Nature Conservancy (TNC), served as Head of The Environmental Program Unit for the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), and was the focal point for the Global Environmental Fund (GEF).